

Peter Lefkowitz is the Chief Privacy & Digital Risk Officer at Citrix. In this role, Peter is responsible for Citrix's digital risk management strategy, including involvement in product and service design, validation of privacy, security and compliance controls across the enterprise, and public policy, as well as providing transparency to customers and partners. Peter joined Citrix from GE Digital, where he served as senior data rights management counsel. In that role he supported GE's digital business, including GE Digital's Predix platform and internet-connected products and predictive analytics solutions. Peter served as GE's chief privacy officer from 2013-2016. Prior to joining GE, he was vice president of privacy and security legal and chief privacy officer at Oracle Corporation.

Peter is a graduate of Harvard Law School and Yale College, and clerked for the Honorable Robert E. Coyle, Chief Judge for the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of California.